

Dear Robert + Cara:

You may be right. Some military training may be valuable to the boys but neither of them are military minded.

If you listen to Sarah Jo, you may think almost anything. The simple truth is I'm no multi-millionaire but none of the children have to worry about a college education unless something unforeseen happens.

A sufficient amount of money is invested for Allen, Greg and Lisha at a rate of interest for the next five years for them to finish college on the interest each year.

Also Ted, Lisha's brother and little Mike (Doris Anne's little 8 year old boy,

Sarah Jo never or + or about having to work because she has two boys in college. They may not have quite as much spending money but they would not suffer if she sent a few dollars less. Neither did Sonat go buy her home. She also owns it and two cars.

The main thing is I had an educational policy for her. She got married and would not go to college. Therefore lost the benefits of the educational policy. When the days were hard, I started bank accounts for them and never used the interest. The interest rate went up and each of the children have quite a nice little nest egg that I can control during my life time, but it will go direct to them as the co adm. at my death.

I do not want to try to chase their vacation for them because Dad wanted me to be a teacher. If I had chosen math, my favorite subject, that is probably all I would know. Instead I started out as Greg is doing - Business administration, added accounting, Banking and finally law. I have been happy in my work, have not been a complete failure and enjoyed life. Even now I sometimes get pretty invaluable but so far I'm ~~same~~ some of the time.

My very worst characteristic is impatience.

For the past few weeks I've nearly blown my mind worrying for fear I wouldn't get a drivers license. Now I think I shall.

If I do, I'll probably give Greg my 10 year old car and get another. However the old one has 79,000 miles, gives me no trouble and is very comfortable, New cars have never been my big concern. So long as they ride + drive comfortable, crank and take me where I want to go and bring me home, I'm very happy with them.

The melon festival will be in June, so far I've made no plans for it but will like very much for you to spend the day with me if you will. So far you are the only two I've mentioned it to. So far I'm not sure of the date.

Robert, I sent Ruth a birthday card a week ^{ago}. Then I found the right date and wrote her a thinking of you card. Had a nice note from her.

Am going back to Dr. Schulze Tuesday,

Lane,

Excell

I hope people can read my letters. I've been trying to write notes + letters because there isn't much else to do except I've had about 40 or 50 people drop in.

The boys always have a job in the summer.
They don't always do the same thing but don't seem to have any trouble getting one every year.

2 I'm not driving yet but believe
2 can with shades.
