

at Bull Hill Plantation in 1864.

Dr. F. P. Pope was Franklin Perry Pope, born 1814 at Fish Hill Plantation on Hilton Head, son of Captain William Pope & his 2nd wife Sarah Scott. Dr. Pope was principal heir of his brother, Joseph Adams Pope who died unmarried in 1846 leaving him Francis Jenkins Island plantation & its slaves. Dr. Pope built his Bluffton house in 1848, the year he married Mary Elizabeth Pope, a daughter of Joseph James Pope about whom you'll hear more.

R. R. Pope was Richard Richardson Pope (sound familiar to you Savannahians?); he was full brother to Dr. Franklin Perry Pope, & was born at Fish Hall 1817, married Martha Julia Scott in St. Helena's Chapel of Edge, built his Bluffton house 1849 where 2 sons & 5 daughters were born; he died in Charleston 1873.

J. J. Pope was Joseph James Pope, born 1792 on Edisto Island, son of Joseph Pope of St. Helena's & his wife Theodora Thous, granddaughter of the distinguished colonial artist, Jeremiah Thous who painted many of our colonial ancestors. Joseph James Pope was married in Zion Chapel of Edge, Hilton Head by Rev. Philip Matthews in 1818 to Sarah Jenkins, younger daughter of planter Isaac Ripon Jenkins who had died accidentally falling down the front stairs of his Jenkins Island Plantation House in 1800 just after her birth. Her older sister Catherine Adams Jenkins married in 1815 Dr. George Moss Stoney & was the mother of Col. J. J. Stoney whose Bluffton Waterfront home was also burned. Joseph James Pope subscribed a substantial amount towards building the Church of the Cross. His valuable 2000-acre Leamington Plantation on Hilton Head, now called Palmetto Dunes, had a substantial 1 1/2 story sand hill type cottage. You can still see "Joe Pope cemetery" there, burying place for the Leamington slaves & their descendants. He refuged near present Allendale during the War & is buried beside his wife in St. Luke's Churchyard. Their chief seat was Mullins Hill on St. Helena's Island; their distinguished son, Col. Joseph Daniel Pope was first Dean of the School of Law at the University of South Carolina.

Squire Pope was William Pope, born 1788 at Fish Hall, son of Revolutionary War Captain William Pope & his first wife, Sarah, daughter of ^{Hilton Head Island} planter Samuel Green and Sarah Norton, another of the daughters of planter Jonathan Norton & Mary Ann Chaplin of St. Helena's. Squire Pope's mother was a wealthy heiress, owning Fish Hall, Springfield, Pinelands and Coggins Point (now Port Royal) plantations on Hilton Head. Squire Pope built the handsome Coggins Point House in 1806 when he married Ann Scott. After her 1815 death he married in 1816 Sarah Lavinia, daughter of his uncle John Pope & Elizabeth Thrus. In 1832 they moved to Skull Creek Plantation House which he bought at the death of Thomas Henry Barksdale, renaming it Cotton Hope.
